Epilogue

The man was dying. He knew it, and so did Rachel Savernake.

“You’ve discovered the truth, haven’t you?” His voice was scratchy.

“Yes.”

His hands trembled. “It was the perfect crime.”

“Is there such a thing?” she asked.

He sighed, a long, low wheeze of surrender. “We thought so.”

“Time is short.” Leaning closer, she felt his sour breath on her cheeks. “Tell me what happened at Mortmain Hall.”
